What is underinsurance?

Underinsurance happens when you don't have enough insurance cover to meet your needs. If the stated value of your property and assets aren't correct, or the time it takes to get your business back up and running after a loss are underestimated, you could be underinsured.

It sounds pretty straight-forward and easy to avoid but with things like the cost of living crisis, labour shortages, supply chain issues and material costs rising globally, we are seeing a steady increase in the number of people and businesses being underinsured.

Who needs to think about underinsurance?

Underinsurance can affect any policy so whether you're a large corporate, an SME or an individual, it is something we feel you should be aware of and talking to your broker about to ensure you are minimising your risk.

How to reduce the risk of being underinsured

-  Get a professional valuation – An expert valuation can help you get a true idea of the value of your assets, giving you the reassurance to choose an appropriate level of cover for your needs.
-  Have regular catch-ups with your broker – These allow you to tell them about any changes you've made to your property or business and will help you understand the level of cover you need.
-  Make sure your period of indemnity is correct – This will help you protect your income and cash flow should the unexpected happen and you need to make a claim.

How big is the problem?

More than 9 out of 10 UK buildings are insured for the wrong amount.¹
(commercial and residential)

Aviva estimate 42% of SMEs who insure buildings with them are underinsured²

Cardinus found 80% of properties surveyed were underinsured by more than £750,000³

What happens when you're underinsured?

The crux of it is that you leave yourself at real risk of having a significant shortfall to pay should you need to make a claim.
