Miriam is an Associate Professor in Comparative Politics at the University of Reading. She is a Visiting Researcher at the University of Oxford (DPIR) and a Senior Visiting Fellow at the London School of Economics (Data Science Institute). She was previously Political Data Scientist for the UK's Labour Party.

Previously, Miriam was an LSE Fellow at the European Institute of the London School of Economics and held Assistant Professorship positions at Swansea University and at the University of Kent. Miriam holds a PhD in Political Science from Trinity College Dublin and is a HEA Fellow.

Miriam specialises in electoral behaviour and public opinion analysis, with a focus on European (incl. British) and European Union politics. She uses quantitative research methods in her research, particularly machine learning and in causal inference methods, with a focus on survey experiments

DR MIRIAM SORACE

Associate Professor in Comparative Politics
University of Reading