BUSINESS AND POLITICS

Friday 27th September 2024

Sarah has a long history in the Chamber Movement and is a great advocate for the power of business for good. Sarah became Chair of the British Chambers of Commerce in 2019, is a Past President of Suffolk Chamber and sat on the board of the London Chamber. In challenging times for business, she has supported the BCC and international network's growth and is working with her teams to ensure they support the growth and prosperity of their members.

She co-chairs the BCC's Workplace Equity Commission and sits on the Steering Board of HM Government's Lilac Review into Disabled Entrepreneurship.

She has a particular interest in skills development and bringing more diversity into the Boardroom and works closely with Neurodiverity in Business. She was awarded the MBE in 2015 for her work on skills development for young people.

With a background in management consultancy, Sarah has worked for high profile organisations including JP Morgan and KPMG. She works with a couple of British tech startups looking at international markets.
