Nevil Muncaster is Thames Water's Strategic Water Resources Director, leading the company's work developing delivery of several complex long-term projects on water resources. He has over 30 years' experience in the international water industry, spanning strategy, asset management and operations.

Before joining Thames Water in 2021, he spent eight years on the Board at Yorkshire Water, where he was Chief Strategy & Regulation Officer and previously Director of Asset Management. Earlier in his career, Nevil held senior leadership roles at Veolia Water, including Managing Director of both Veolia Water South East and Tendring Hundred Water.

Nevil is focused on long-term water resilience, infrastructure renewal, and supporting sustainable growth across London and the South East.
