Clayton leads the strategy function within CityFibre group; a rapidly scaling company investing over £4bn in connecting 8m homes and businesses to the Internet with modern FTTH networks across the UK. Previously, Clayton ran products for CityFibre.

Clayton joined CityFibre from Vodafone in 2016 – where he'd led a full strategic assessment of consumer fibre network futures, advised on network investments and provided technical input into various regulatory projects. Prior to this he undertook a range of strategic roles within BT's Openreach division – including improving the way Next Generation Access (NGA) was built and managing a Carrier Ethernet, DWDM and TDM product portfolio worth over 900 million pounds.
